Now, under modern conditions, many young women appear to have forgotten how to blush and few think it necessary to take their mothers into their confidence. Many mothers, on the other hand, seem extremely unsophisticated when it is a question of their daughters' behavior, permitting them latitude and privileges which frequently lead to regrettable results. He urged the young women of the parish to assist at the exercises of the retreat, the serious devotions, instructions and meditations of which must prove of great benefit to all attending. Grand Army Men Attend Central Baptist Church-"Our Un finished Task" is Rev. Dr. Slocum's Theme-To Cement Broken Ties and Produce Good Citizenship.

By invitation of the pastor, Rev. Dr. Joel B. Slocum. Sedgwick post, No. 1, G. A. R., with its associated organizastions, attended the morning service Sunday at the Central Baptist church in observance of Memorial Sunday. For attendance at the church service the Grand Army men met at the Buckinsham Memorial, marching from there to the church, where they were scated in a section reserved for them in the center. The Woman's Relief corps members met at the church in a room adjoining the auditorium and marched in in a body just before the service began. Members of the Sons of Veterans were also present, the special guests numbering in all about fifty.

Our Unfinished Task. Dr. Slocum took two texts, one from John 4, 38, "Other men labored and we are entered into their labors," and the other from Lincoln's Gettysburg address, "It is for us the living rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work they who fought here thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us." The theme of the sermon was "Our Unfinished Task."

the sermon was "Our Unfinished Task."

Dr. Slocum spoke as follows:
Lincoln's address at Gettysburg is the masterpiece of literature. Edward Everett was the orator of the day, and in a masterly, polished effort, two hours long, he rehearsed the causes of the war and the conditions then existing north and south. When Everett had finished there was tremendous applause. Then Lincoln came to the front and with a voice throbbing with emotion he said a few words. A titter ran through the crowd as he began in a shrill voice, but the titter soon gave place to intense attention. The listaners felt that here was a man with a breaking heart saying something that he must speak, something they must hear. When he had finished, and he was through in a very short time, no handclap broke the air—only a sigh as men and women with tearful eyes looked at one another. And the great Lincoln honestly thought he had failed utterly. Walking up to Everett, he extended his congratulations. Everett replied: "Ah, Mr. President, how gladly would I exchange all my huadred pages for your twenty lines."

Heal the Remaining Wounds, One item of our unfinished work consists in healing the few remaining wounds. That ugly scar across our country that we used to call Mason's and Dixon's line is now pretty well nited up, Alas, that that fearful trench had to be filled with the best blood of the nation north and south. But just as the blood of the martyrs became the seed of the church, so the and Dixon's line is now pretty well filled up. Alas, that that fearful trench had to be filled with the best blood of the nation north and south. But just as the blood of the martyrs became the seed of the church, so the blood of the soldiers became the seed of the church, so the blood of the soldiers became the seed of the republic. The trench is filled up and flowers are growing where thorns used to rankle.

LAvy tells us that an earthquake in Rome resulted in a piece of ground in the middle of the Forum sinking to an immense depth, creating a fearful chasm. The oracles were consulted and it was declared that the commonwealth could not be continued unless the most valuable thing in the state should be cast into the opening. Metius Curtius, considering that arms and bravery are the most valuable things, dressed in full military uniform and mounting a spirited horse dashed into the abyas. Valerius Maximus is authority for the statement that the chasm immediately closed. The lesson is the same as though the story were fact. A mighty convulsion tors our nation apart. The oracles were consulted. Back from the altars of liberty came this reply: This nation cannot be perpetuated unless the richest treasure of the nation is cast into the chasm. See our boys were of the state of the statement that has been done in homes, churches and other buildings and to vehicles by the heavy oil that the city has been spread with it, and it was voted that in view of the chasm. richest treasure of the nation is cast into the chasm. So our boys were thrown in. And then came the result: Liberty and union—one and insepara—some time after the conflict the nation was weak from loss of blood—sick almost unto death. The words of the immortal Lincoln are especially in point just here. It is for us the living rather to be dedicated to the great task remaining before us. That task requires the giving of our strength and vitality in order that the nation may continue to live.

on it, inspectors were appointed for districts and as fast as a yard was noted cleaned up its place was indicated by a pink paster on the map. Before the Putnam clean-up week was over the city son's artery to another is now successfully performed. So the veins of young and vigorous life are being tapped in order that they may pour into the veins of our nation's life the vital veins of our nation's life the vital forces that are necessary for its continued prosperity. It is not enough that great sacrifice, six and a half billions in money and a million lives north and south and other sacrifices which no man can name. All this did its work, but we are still face to face with our unfinished business.

I have tried to emphasize the first item of that business, to heal sectional animosities. The next thing is to give animosities. The next thing is to give to take home on Monday. over the city was represented by map entirely pink.

ourselves to the glorious work of citizenship. In no other way could we honor our dead so successfully as in this. It is good once a year, yes, oftener than that, to go apart from the thronging cares of our present day concerns and meditate on our legacy and give thanks for them who bore the battle in the heat of the day.

A proclamation issued by Mayor Dennis J. Murphy of Lowell covers the clean-up idea along practicable lines. He advised as follows:

Make your plans today for cleaning your premises.

Begin with the attic and go through to the basement and then take the back yards and the front yards, removing all paper, ashes, wood, garback yards and the front yards, removing all paper, ashes, wood, garback yards and the front yards, removing all paper, ashes, wood, garback excelsion, old papers, tin cans, old rags and all rubbish of all kinds.

Be ready with all filth and trash in the street when the city wagons come around to haul it away.

Screen up all your doors and windows, especially the windows of your pantry, kitchen and dising room and have your milk bottles clean, and protect the milk,

Thoroughly clean all garbage cans. Have them emptied and sprinkle the contents with crude oil, lime or kerosene oil.

Fill up all low places in yard and prevent stagnant water.

Join the cleanup army and help Service for Citizenship.

If we are ready to spring forth in answer to our country's call for service on the battlefield, we should be no less willing to give our service in times of peace—our service to everything that conserves good citizenship.

New York was stirred the other day when the bodies of our brave boys came back from Mexico. Good citizenship will unite us more than anything else. Patrick Henry once said: "I am not a Virginian, I'm an American! The blue and the gray, the buff and the red are brothers, We are one people with one language and one flag. The sons of the north and south fought together in the war with Spain in 1898,

It is for us now to prove our fellowship by our good citizenship. There is much to be done. There is a tendency in this country to greatly ignore law. It should be our purpose to strengthen the arm of the law. The man who incites violence should be taken care of. Those who resort to violence are anarchists. God is not always on the side of the heaviest battalion, but He is on the side of the right. Right will side of the heaviest battalion, but He is on the side of the right. Right will finally prevail. God was with Abraham Lincoln and all the men between these two who stood for right.

CLAIMANT APPEARS FOR ESTATE OF $42,000

Heir to Wilhelmina Von Glahn Who Died at Norwich State Hospital.

What it Means.

There are great things that we must continue to battle for, sil embraced under the term good citizenship. They include the purity of the home, free education, the incorreptibility of the judiciary, the purity of the ballot, the protection of life and property, the stability of the state, the supremacy of the federal authority, the recognition of religious liberty, and international arbitration.

The battles are the same as of old. Treason still exists. Treason has never had other than punishment and that death. The treason of our land should be shot through and through with ballots. There are a lot of things needing our attention. Temperance, social purity, the rights of the various races, the questions of capital and labor. Our weak spot is the municipality with the saloon in control.

On with the crusade! Fire no blank cartridges. The spirit of our fathers is reproducing itself in their sons and daughters.

Dr. Slocum concluded his inspiring sermon with the following verses: Withelmina Von Glahn, who died at the Norwich State hospital over a year ago, turns out of have been owner of an estate of $42,500, for which search for an heir has been made for some time. A claimant for the estate has just appeared in the person of Edward Von Glahn of Hinsdale, Mass, who says he is the only living relative of Wilhelmina Von Glahn. He has so informed Probate Judge Glison of New Haven who had about concluded that he would have to turn the money over to the German consul.
